PROJECT UnLonely
From the Foundation for Art & Healing

Sponsor Season 9 of Project UnLonely Films!

Reducing loneliness is a tall order. We're doing it through short films.

Loneliness is a global public health emergency affecting every segment of the population. To address this, The Foundation for Art & Healing is educating the world about loneliness, reducing the stigma that surrounds it, and connecting people to free, arts-based programs that help them connect and flourish. Join us!

Project UnLonely Films is a one-of-a-kind library of more than 100 short films that tell diverse, powerful stories about loneliness and connection. From dramas to comedies, live action to animation, these short films inspire self-reflection and meaningful conversations.

Sponsorship puts you at the forefront of public arts programming that addresses the physical and emotional health impacts of loneliness. As a sponsor, you will benefit all year long. Benefits include:

- Project UnLonely Films media exposure: We have generated media stories in prominent news outlets and publications, including PBS NewsHour, NBC News, BBC News, The Wall Street Journal, CBS Morning Show, Vogue, and The Washington Post.
- Promotional support and coordination with Project UnLonely Films staff to highlight your involvement.
- Recognition and participation at the Project UnLonely Films Launch Event in June 2025, where arts, medical, and public policy luminaries will join us as we screen the winning films and present awards to the filmmakers.

In June, we will host a celebration for the next season of Project UnLonely Films where filmmakers, special guests, and sponsors will gather to watch the winning films. Project UnLonely Films luminaries include:

Mike Paseornek
Former President of Lionsgate Films

Dr. Michelle A. Williams
Former Dean of the Harvard T. H. Chan School of Public Health

Steve Buscemi
Award-winning actor and director

We curate our films with an equity and inclusion lens. Film themes focus on diverse groups and are delivered through programs on college campuses, in the workplace, and in community organizations. We reach older adults, people of color, immigrants, LGBTQ+ communities, veterans, and more.

Project UnLonely Films Sponsors enjoy visibility for one full year!

- Visibility to our networks: We will recognize your commitment and generosity in our twice-monthly emails to all of our audiences and on our website.
- Acknowledgement in our programs: We will include your logo on our public health platforms when employers, health plans, community organizations, and universities stream the films.

Join the global conversation on loneliness!

Loneliness has gained global attention and recognition as a public health crisis. Project UnLonely Films sponsorship is a chance to elevate your brand and have an active voice in this urgent conversation.

Align your brand with:

- Ending the stigma that surrounds loneliness
- Fostering meaningful connections with self and others
- Creating and sustaining healthier communities
